Twitter Threads	Tweet 1 Making the Most of Your Time: The Real Value of Virtual Coffees Virtual coffee meetings can seem like a great opportunity, but they often fall short if not structured well. Here's why they need to offer real value: (1/6) #Networking #BusinessGrowth #ProfessionalDevelopment Tweet 2 Time is More Than Money: Every minute counts. Virtual coffees without concrete value are costly in resources and relationships. Reserve time for well-prepared meetings with actionable outcomes. (2/6) Tweet 3 Lack of Structure: Informal virtual coffees often lack a clear agenda, leading to meandering conversations. Productive meetings need a clear purpose, objectives, and deliverables. (3/6) Tweet 4 Superficial Engagement: Without focus, virtual coffees can become superficial networking. Professionals need deep, data-backed discussions on real challenges and opportunities, not just chit-chat. (4/6)

Tweet 5

“Used Car Sales” Tactics: Many virtual coffee invites feel disingenuous. Authenticity matters. Engage with clear, evidence-based proposals rather than vague promises. (5/6)

Tweet 6

A Smarter Approach: Be clear and concise, provide evidence, set an agenda, and focus on solutions. This ensures meaningful, productive discussions and successful collaborations. (6/6)
